DESCRIPTION

Floor lamp in solid elm, consisting of a vertical board supporting a light arm adjustable in height through a pulley system. The shade, in pleated paper with a honeycomb effect, diffuses a soft and warm light, contrasting with the linear and robust structure of the solid wood.

Through its rigorous conception and balance between function and expression, this model reflects an architect's work, where structure itself becomes an aesthetic element. The piece embodies the pursuit of a design that is both functional and poetic, typical of the 1970s.

France, circa 1970.
